

FOUR SEASONS HOTEL
Tokyo at Marunouchi

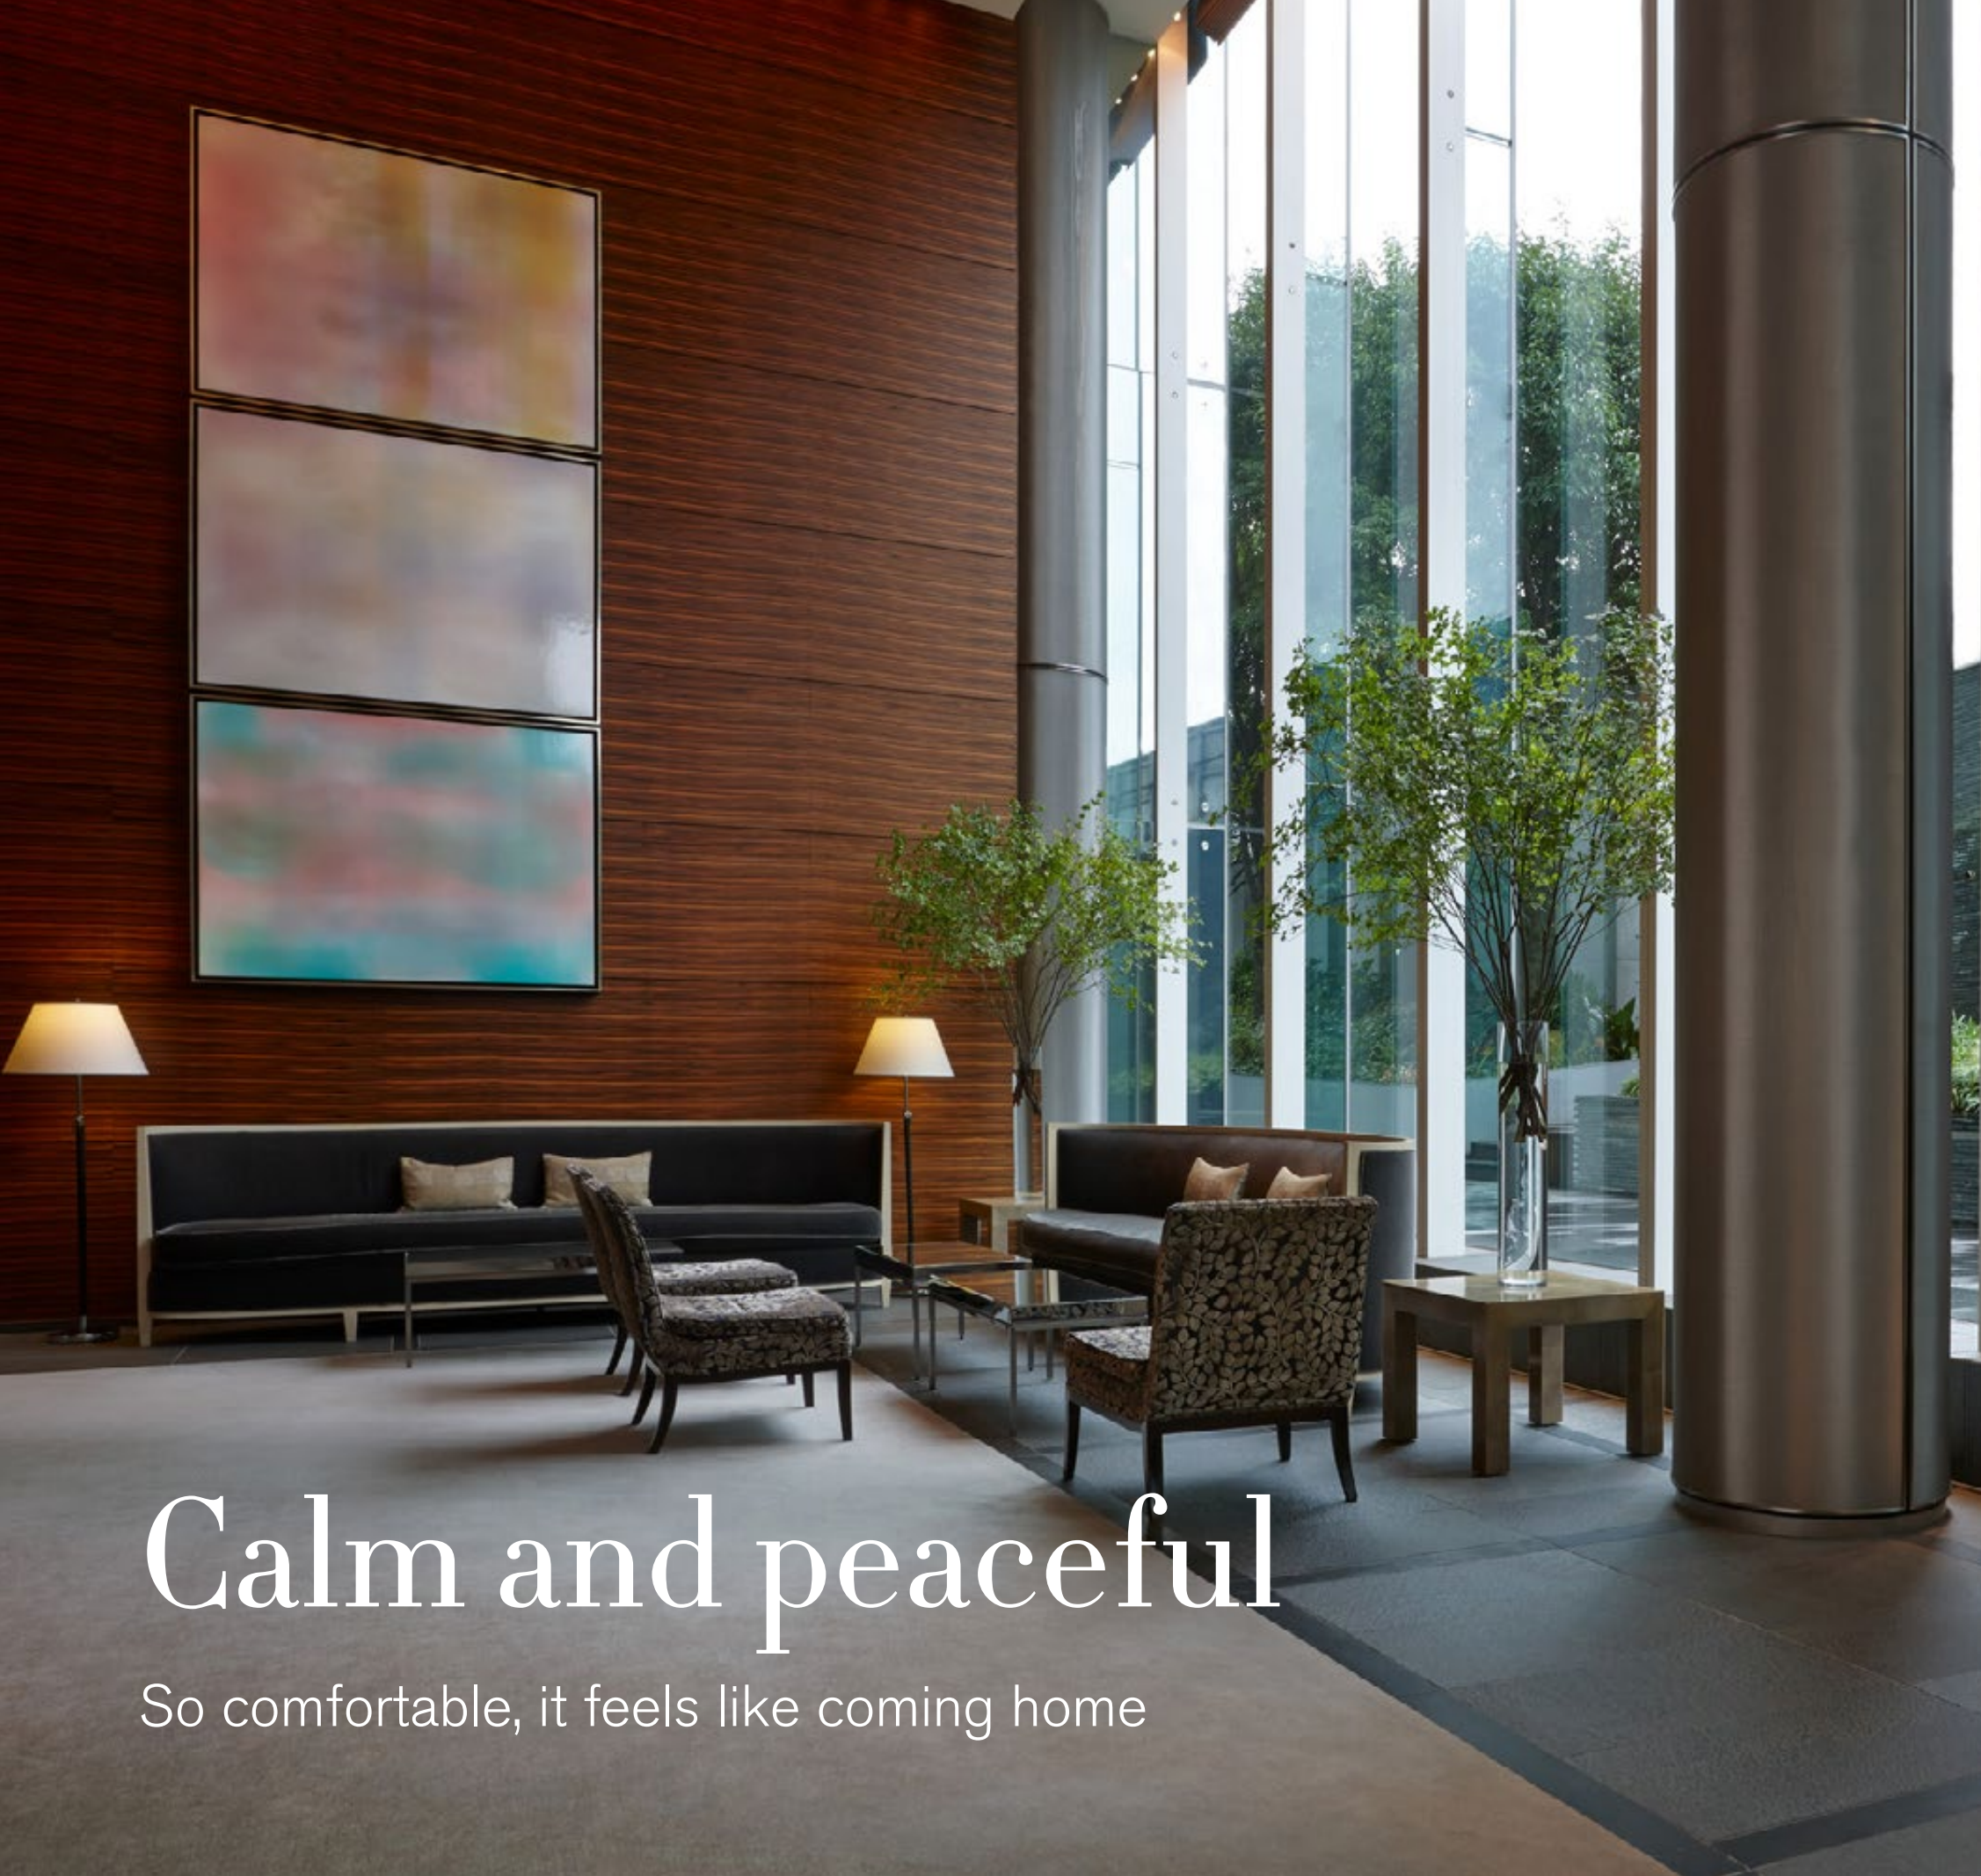

A nighttime photograph of Tokyo Station, a grand red brick building with a large central dome and arched windows, illuminated with warm yellow lights. In the background, several modern skyscrapers with glowing windows stand against a dark blue sky. The scene is a mix of historical architecture and modern urban development.

In the heart of everything

Steps from Tokyo Station, the Imperial Palace and Ginza shopping

In a lively location that's equally appealing for business and sightseeing, Four Seasons resides within Pacific Century Place Marunouchi. Just a three-minute walk from Tokyo Station, this is the only international hotel with direct underground access to the station – ideal for travel within Tokyo or elsewhere in Japan, or for rail connections to Narita International Airport. A Four Seasons team member will greet you on the platform, assist with your luggage and personally escort you to the hotel.

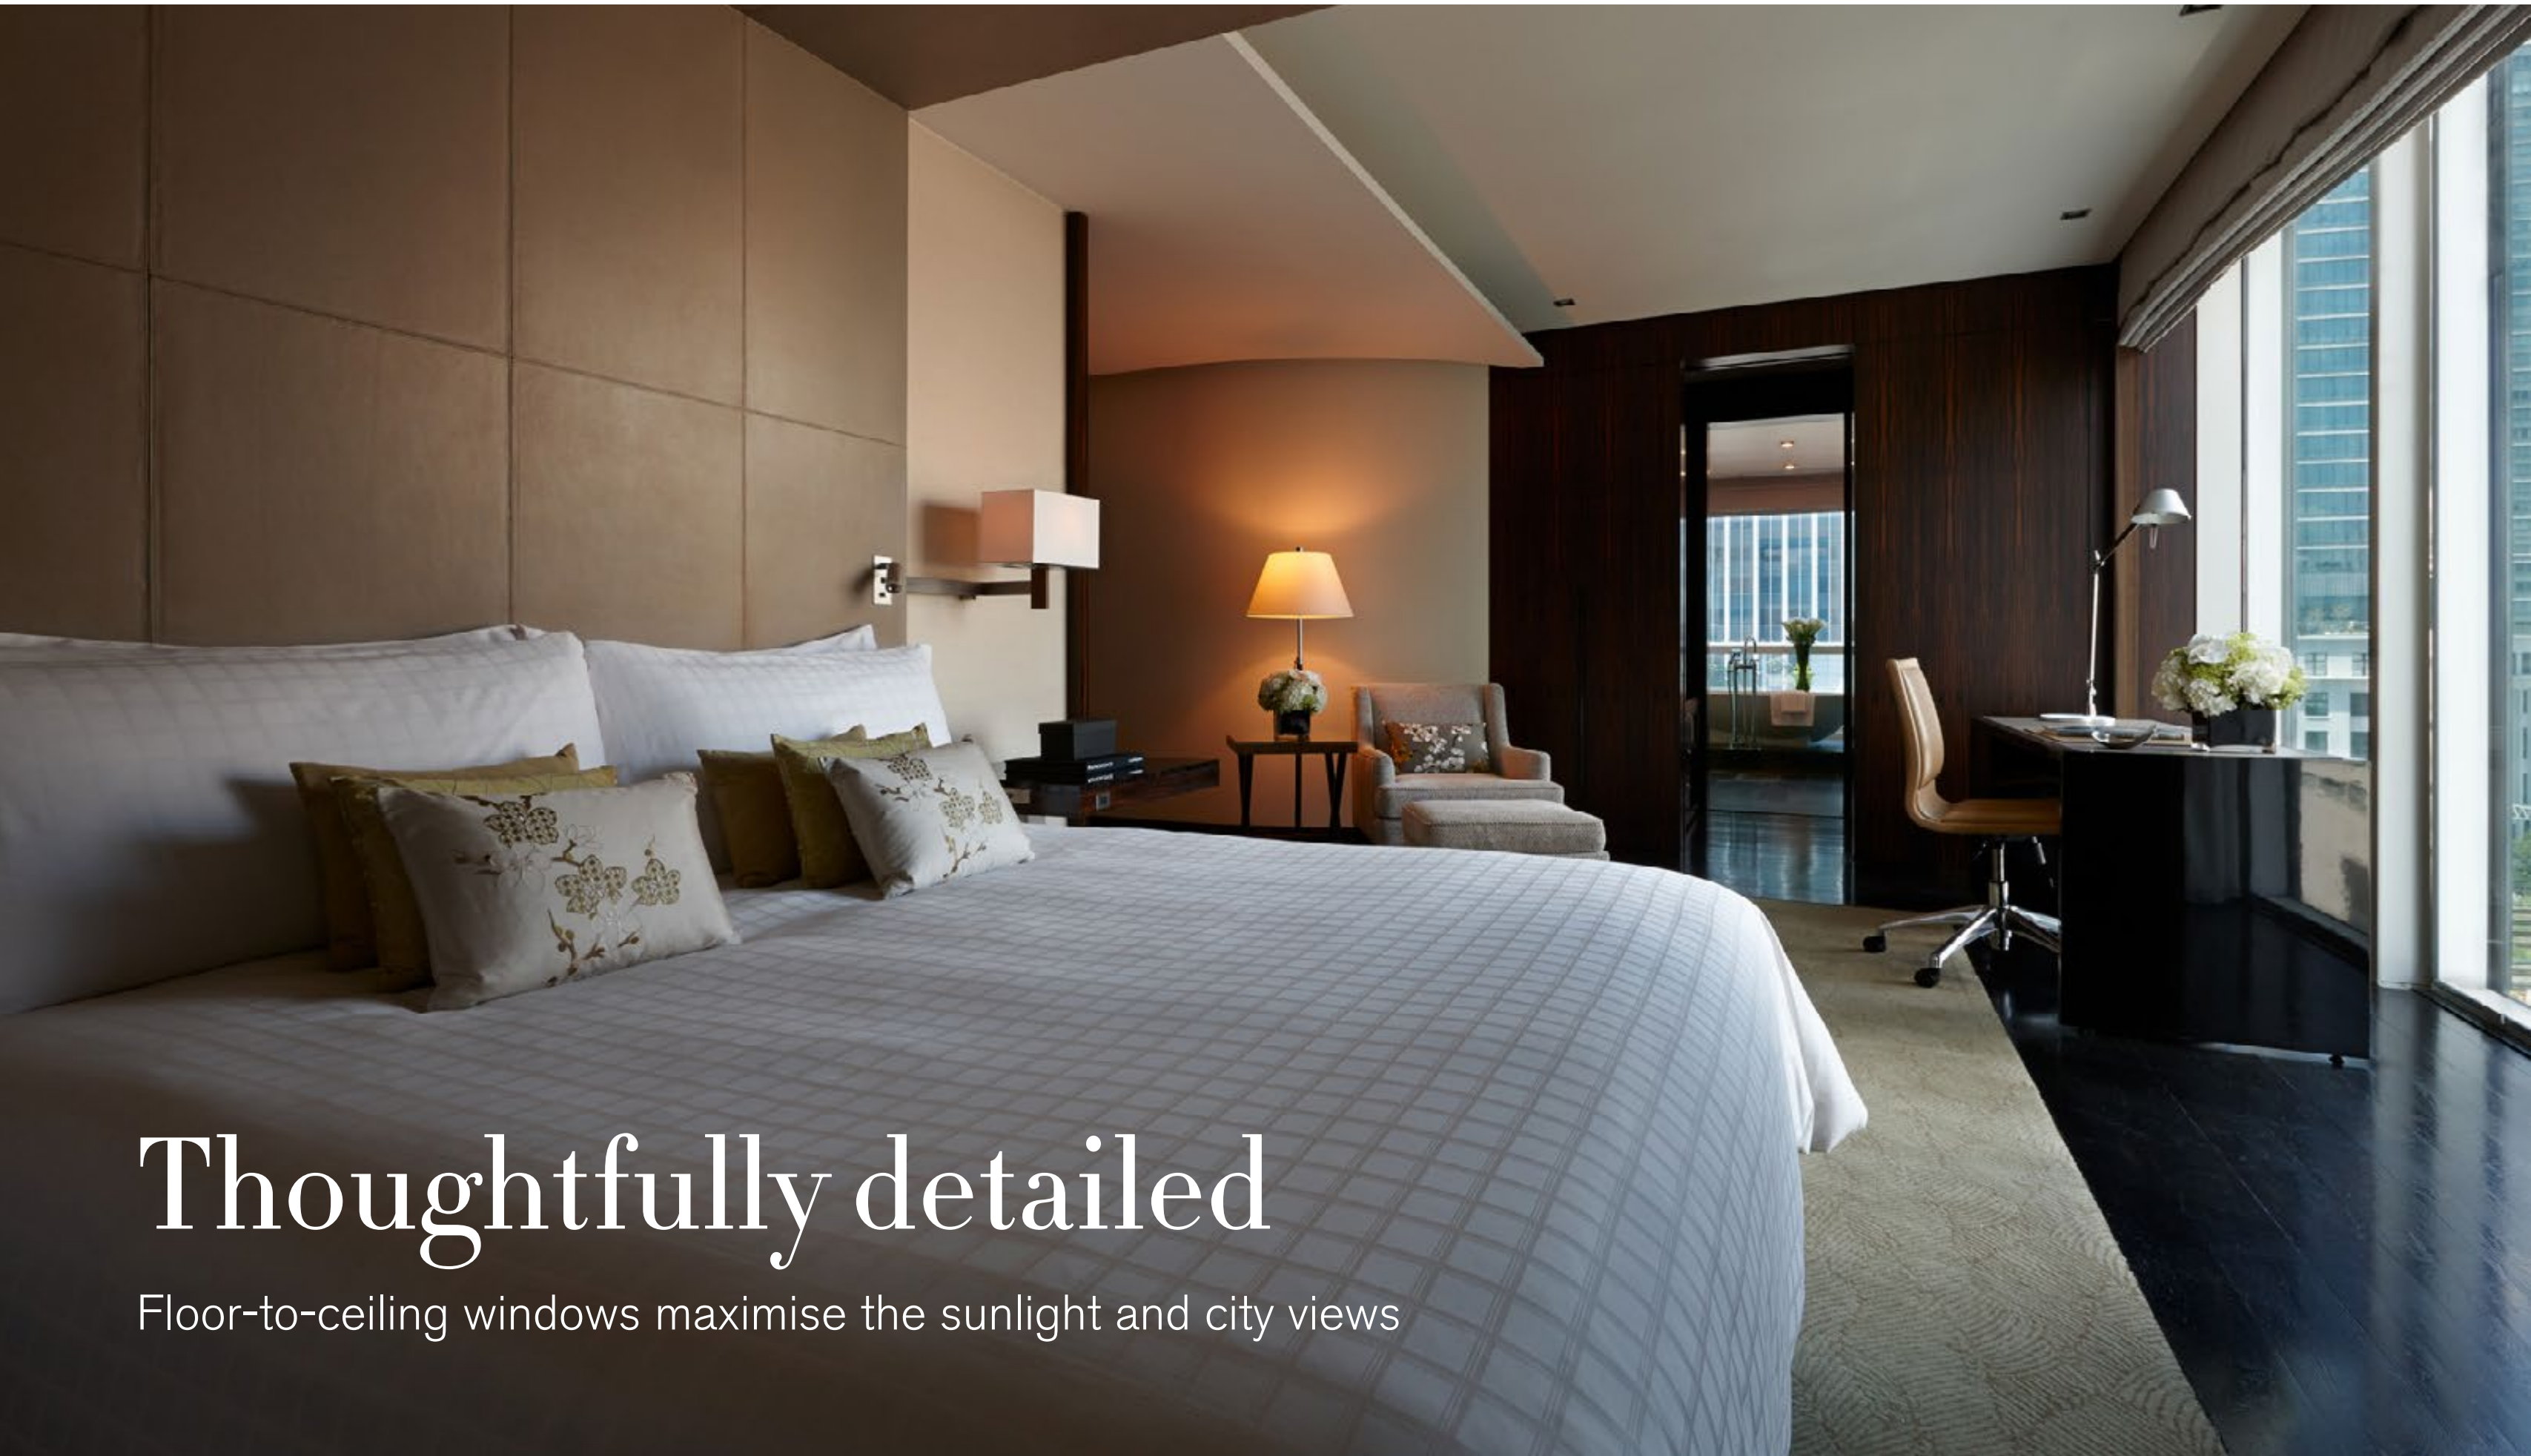

Calm and peaceful

So comfortable, it feels like coming home

Leave behind the busy Tokyo streets and immediately feel the tranquillity of our boutique-style enclave – the smallest Four Seasons hotel in the world – with just 57 guest rooms, including nine suites. Our expert staff are available around the clock to ensure your constant peace of mind – whether you require last-minute dry cleaning, translation of a business presentation, or assistance with travel plans.

Thoughtfully detailed

Floor-to-ceiling windows maximise the sunlight and city views

Providing you with extra space for relaxing or entertaining, our One-Bedroom Suites feature 270-degree corner views of Tokyo – especially dazzling as you dip into the sleek egg-shaped bathtub. For entertainment, enjoy the 3D/Blu-ray TV with surround sound.

Modern minimalist décor

The simplicity feels restful and refreshing
