Lāna'i City

The island's main town was established when James Dole purchased nearly the entire island of Lāna'i in November 1922 in order to cultivate pineapples. Dole built a plantation camp, which eventually became the foundation for Lāna'i City. The layout was influenced by traditional town designs, where streets are arranged in grid style around a main square or green.

Between 1924 and 1929, Lāna'i City prospered, and most of the existing buildings and streets were constructed during this short period. Today the population is about 3,100. It's a fun place to come for a "Dole Stroll," visiting the local shops, galleries, coffee shops and restaurants. Enjoy a casual lunch at Ganotisi's, Blue Ginger Café or dinner at Lāna'i City Bar and Grill. You can even see a movie at the Hale Keaka Lāna'i Theater.

Cat lovers should stop by the Lāna'i Cat Sanctuary. A paradise for island cats and kittens, this expansive open-air facility draws more than 1,500 visitors a year. Kids will love petting kittens in the "Kittengarden" and watching cats play. The shelter provides lifetime food, water and medical care for its residents.

LĀNA'I CITY SHOPPING

We're pleased to say there's not a single shopping mall on our island! But you'll find many shops and cafés in nearby Lāna'i City. The streets bordering Dole Park offer up a selection of galleries, including the Hawai'i Deep Art Gallery and the Lāna'i Art Center. Shop at charming boutiques, such as The Local Gentry and Hula Hut for local fashion, unique souvenirs and handcrafted keepsakes. Try Richard's Market for delicious souvenirs.

A FOUR SEASONS RESORT

Lāna'i Culture & Heritage Center

From the 1950s through the 1970s, Lāna'i was the world's largest pineapple plantation, but there is much more to the island's history.

Our island's official museum, the Lāna'i Culture & Heritage Center – located in Lāna'i City – covers nearly a millennium of changes, from the year 1000 when the first Hawaiians settled here to the end of the plantation era in 1992.

The museum features all kinds of local treasures: clothing, furniture and plantation equipment, as well as poi pounders and ulu maika (“bowling”) stones that residents found when working in the fields. It's a fascinating opportunity to learn more about this unique island paradise.
